A security officer is on duty at each suburban location Monday-Thursday from 7:15-10:15 pm and at the Indianapolis location any time classes are in session. If there is no security officer on duty, the call will go to the location's front desk.

To reach Franklin's Director of Safety and Security Services, call 614.947.6901.

As always, if you are in an emergency situation, call 911 BEFORE calling campus security.

MySafeCampus

FIAT's awareness of and response to inappropriate behavior is dependent upon the sharing of information. You are encouraged to use MySafeCampus (www.mysafecampus.com) to provide information about any situation that you believe may be of concern.

This tool allows for anonymous reporting and the information is routed to the appropriate area. For example, information about students is routed to the Dean of Students, while information pertaining to employees is routed to the Vice President of Human Resources.

Franklin University Alerts

To improve communications in the event of a campus emergency or closure, Franklin utilizes "Franklin University Alerts," a notification system that will allow critical information to be sent via email or text message directly to registered users. This voluntary service is available to all Franklin students, faculty, and staff members.

Registration information will not be shared with outside sources and will only be used to send emergency messages. You can sign up at www.e2campus.com/my/franklin.

FIAT THE FRANKLIN INTERVENTION & AWARENESS TEAM

Maintaining a safe campus environment

FIAT overview & mission

The primary mission of the Franklin Intervention & Awareness Team (FIAT) is to promote the health and safety of our students, faculty, and staff by creating an environment where development and education are bolstered by caring intervention, thus ensuring a place where individuals are free to work, learn, and teach without disruption or threat of intimidation or harm.

FIAT is Franklin's centralized resource for creating awareness of inappropriate behavior within the University community. Integral to this awareness is developing Franklin's culture of information sharing, which creates an opportunity for FIAT to assess and intervene as appropriate with supportive services.

Therefore, a key element to the FIAT primary mission of maintaining safe environments is to provide our University with training and education regarding inappropriate behavior, including how and when to report.

Members

FIAT is a cross-functional team of senior leadership comprised of both faculty and administration. A legal consultant and a licensed psychologist are also part of the team.

In addition, FIAT may identify Student Code of Conduct Hearing Officers or other University officials to participate as required by the nature of an incident under FIAT review.

How FIAT intersects with other campus resources

Student Code of Conduct

One avenue FIAT utilizes to address some student behavior concerns is the process of resolving Student Code of Conduct (SCOC) violations. This involves the review of a student incident by an SCOC Hearing Officer who gathers and reviews relevant information, including information obtained from the student, often in a face-to-face meeting.

Outcomes of SCOC incident reviews may include:

- A recommendation for continued monitoring of student progress and behavior
- Referral to the Coaching Program
- Referral to community resources for assistance with mental health and other needs

Coaching Program

Based on information received about a student, referral to the Coaching Program may be provided to the student for support with adjusting to college-level expectations including time management, organizational skills, and goal achievement.

Employee Assistance Program (EAP)

In response to concerns involving employees, FIAT may advise that faculty or staff members use the Employee Assistance Program whenever it is deemed to be an appropriate resource for addressing employee needs.

“FIAT’s focus on prevention and caring intervention encourages and enables the development of genuine, trusting relationships here at Franklin. FIAT has become a key component of our ability to build and sustain an active, diverse group of students, faculty, staff, and community and business partners.”

- Dr. David Decker
President, Franklin University

Early intervention: A positive example

Janice (name changed) is a student who was brought to FIAT’s attention by a staff member who found her to be excessively confrontational. A meeting with Janice to address her behavior revealed that she had significant gaps in her education and socialization skills.

Janice was referred to the Coaching Program, which is open to both undergraduate and graduate students, and assigned to a single, initial point of contact who would help her to more professionally communicate any school-related problems or issues. She was also placed on probation for two terms, during which time she was expected to demonstrate control and restraint in her interactions with fellow classmates, faculty, and staff.

The outcome was positive. Janice took immediate advantage of the single point of contact, a support service that proved useful in helping her to identify and more clearly verbalize specific concerns. She completed the following two terms without a repeat incidence of confrontational behavior and continued to make progress toward her educational goals.
